SAYS the N. C. Dally News:—According to private letter received from Chungking, that port was to be formally opened on the 1st of March Under the conditions to which our government has agreed, in the face of the melancholy "divergence of opinion," we do not know that the exact date of opening is of much consequence to any one, but some authority might have notified it, in case there was any one anxious to establish himself in business there. As Chungking was to be opened, according to the agreement, on the 18th of January, when the ratifications were exchanged, there was plenty of time between that date and the 1st of March to notify the public. We put the date on record now, so that when Chungking holds its jubilee, in 1941, there may be no question about the exact date.

WE regret to hear of the death, at Tacoma, of Capt. H. C. Dearborn, an old hand on the China coast and well-known in Hongkong as commander of the Pacific Mail Co.'s steamship City of Peking. Capt. It will be remembered that he was in command of the City Peking when she collided with the Messageries Maritimes steamer Saghalies in Hongkong harbour on the 29th September, 1886, and in the following year he retired from sea-faring life and settled down as a marine surveyor at Tacoma. A Yokohama contemporary hears that the cause of death was brain fever, brought on by the bursting of a blood-vessel in the head. The funeral took place on February 16th. No more deservedly popular skipper than Capt, Dearborn ever entered this port, and his sudden and totally unexpected death will be sincerely regretted by all who knew him.

REGARDING the recent reform in the judicial and consular arrangements at Shanghal, the N. C. Daily News attributes the changes to the "malignant activity" of an old British Minister to China. March 23rd.

LAU TIT LAM v. SORABJEE JORABJEE BHABA This was an action in which the plaintiff asked for an injunction against the erection of a public latrine by the defendant.

Mr. Pollock, instructed by Messrs. Caldwell and Wilkinson, was for the plaintiff, and Dr. Ho Kai, instructed by Mr. Ho Wyson, appeared on behalf of the defendant. Mr. Pollock said the plaintiff was the owner and occupier of a house, No. 5, Tung Shing Lane, and he asked for an injunction restraining the defendant from erecting a public latrine on land recently occupied by houses Nos. 1 and Tung Shing Lane. The circumstances of the case, were that the plaintiff was a trader having a shop at No. 73. Bonham Strand, and residing which the plaintiff alleges will cause a public employed for some time to come, the principal but incisive style adopted here sproved nuisance and will also depreciate the value of disturbing factor in our business, the Manila. plaintiff's premises. The defendant in his answer, says the latrice will be kept according to regulations laid down, and he denies that it will depreciate the value of the premises. The plaintiff alleges that a nuisance will be caused to him, and also that the defendant is wrongly putting his premises to such a use as t depreciate the market value of his property. I cases like the present it was not necessary to prove that there would be danger to life, but just sufficient to prove that the crection of a latrine would interfere with the ordinary comfort of human existence. They contended that absolutely the worst place had been selected.

His lordship asked if the latrine was being crected with the sanction of the Sanitary Board or the Government, or by the defendant for his

Mr, Pollock said the defendant was erecting it Dr. Ho Kai said it was being erected for a public benefit.

sest of thing that he would have recommended, I the erection of lattines, but that ordinance was repealed by Ordinance is of 1880, and I therefore the defendant was simply erecting the latrine for trade, and considered it to be the best use for which he could put his property to, The defendant was acting on his nwn behalf and not by any Public Board. Tung Shing Lane was practically a small area, 11 ft. wide at one end, to feet 3 inches at the other end and only 63 feet in length. On each side of the lane houses of three stories and five stories were erected, the only entrance to those houses being by the archway in Wellington Street. was no circulation or air-passage in the lane, and the proposed latrine would, only be 38, 6in. from the plaintiff's windews. Under those circumstances they contended it would be an intolerable nuisance and would depreciate the property of plaintiff. The walls of the lattine had been run up to some height, but during the last few days the work had been stopped.

Mr. R. K. Leigh, civil engineer and architect said he had visited Turg Shing Lane, which runs south from Wellington Street. He had measured the length of the houses opening on to it, from which he made the plan produced. The approach to it was up a stone stair which led into a possage five feet wide. The lane wit 63 feet-long, 17 feet wide at the northern end, and to feet 3 inch at the other. There was no other entrance to the lane except by the archway. The houses in the line were three and five storied. The lattine had been partly built, one wall being 15 feet high and a cross-wall about 8 feet in beight. The area of the lattine inside the walls was eight hundred square feet. The distance from the plaintiff's nearest window was 3 feet 6 inches. He had seen the plan of the proposed latrine. On the ground floor was Persons passing by the door of the latrine, and persons living opposite, would have an uninterrupted view into the latrine. There was also provision made for the erection of forty closets on each floor. There were four large ven'i lators provided to ventilate the lower floor through the upper floor, terminating in one lantern. There were also two 7 irch vents close to the back wall, which came out just against the roof, and another 4 inch vent on the N. E. corner. The lantern was just about on a level with the upper floor windows of the plaintiff's house, from which it was distant 24ft. The gases would go all through the lane. The latrine was certainly not in a good situation and was not suitable, because it was enclosed by three solid walls and would only open on the side which opened into the lane. There was only one door and three small windows on the ground floor, one of the latter opened into the urinal and the other two into the staircase, so that the admitted through the latter would ascend up the stairway, leaving the ground floor without sufficient ventilation. The latrine would have the effect of depreciating all the property in the lane. The percentage of depreciation would almost be fifty per cent. He had had no interes in the building of the houses.

Cross-examined-He knew several privately owned latrines. He was certainly of opinion that property would be depreciated by the existence of a latrine. By experience he knew people objected to residing near a latrine. He could not give an instance where property depreciated through the existence of a latrine. He knew the public latrine in the Tung Mun Lane, approached from the Praya. He would say that the property in proximity thereto had depreciated in value.

By his lordship...There was no arrangement for drainage, except by surface channels leading

Surgeon-Major F. E. Barrow, Army Medical Staff, said as an Army officer he had been in the habit of inspecting the sanitary arrangements of barracks. He had inspected Tung Shing Lane on two occasions and had seen the latrine which was partially erected. He did not think a more unsultable site for a latrine could have been selected. Most probably the existence of such a latrine would effect the health of the inhabitants in the lane. He was of opinion that noxions vapours would enter the plaintiff's house particularly during the hot months. He never knew of a public latrine being erected on a site surrounded by houses. Cross-exammed-He was not acquainted with public latrines in the Colony. He had had some experience of Chinese houses and was of opinion that a latrine should have thorough ventilation in every direction.

By his lordship-I do not think that any attention would render the latrine perfectly free from being injurious to health.

At this stage the court adjourned.

THE LOSS OF THE "NANZING!

The Nansing, which went asherent about 4n m. on the both instant on one of the I emaist inds, situated about 20 miles from this port, will, we now hear, become a total loss. The Dock Company's tug Pilot Fich. Captain Stopani, has brought in 1,200 bales of hemp out of the 3,000 bales on board, and there is every hope of saving the rest of the hemp, but the enrgo of sugar, stowed in the fore-hold, is, of course, a total loss, There were eight European presenger on board the Nausing besides 125 Chinere, all of whom, with the exception one Chinaman who was drowned, have now been brought to Hon kong from the rock on which they were landed shortly after the accident, and whereon they appear to bave had rather an unpleasant time, of it owing to provisions run short, and through exposure to the fog and mist which prevailed for many hours. All the passengers speak most highly of the cone; duct of Captain Hoge, his officers and engineers, who spared no pains to make the situation as agreeable as circumstances would permit. In a large measure it was owing to the coolness and promptitude displayed by the Captain that a general panic was averted. The Chinaman was drowned owing to one of the boats, which was overloaded, capsizing when the passengers were being landed on the rocks; there being a heavy swell rolling in at the time. The usual Marine Court of Inquiry will be held in the course of a few days, and the ship, as she lies, will, it is said, be put up to auction.

MR. GEO. C. MILN AS HAMLET.

A large audience crowded the Theatre Royal, City Hall, in every part on Saturday night, the special attraction being Mr. George C. Miln, the well-known American Shakesperean actor, as Hamlet. Mr. Miln's reputation had preceded him, as was clearly evidenced by the very hearty and gratifying reception accorded both to himself the other members of his company, is the almost invariable custom of tragedians to make their dibut before s strange audience in Shokespere's wonderful master-piece, and the policy must be admitted to be based on substantial grounds. Hamlet is such a marvellous study, his every word and act give such an insight into the profundities of human nature, and the wit and wisdom of the great dramatist are so conspicuously in evidence from first to last, that even actors of only moderate calibre seldom fail to achieve a certain amount of success, and it is even rarer still that the play fails to prove a public attraction. The Prince of Denmark is evidently a favorite with Mr. Miln, who, during a comparatively short career on the stage, has appeared in the character about a thousand times in his tours through the United States, Australia, India and other parts of the civilised globe, and no doubt he exercised sound judgment in selecting it for his opening night in Hongkong.

Mr. Miln has brought a numerically strong company to the Far East; with regard to their allround histrionic abilities we shall be better able to speak after having seen more of them. Hamlet is not a safe criterion of the dramatic merits. of those filling the subordinate roles. However, the management of this Company are certainly entitled to recognition for the efforts they have evidently made to bring their representations of Shakespere's works up to as high a standard of completeness and general excellence as circumstances "would permit. Hamlet was capitally staged on Saturday night, the scenery was good, and the effect of the representation was considerably enhanced by an excellent orchestra, comprised of bandsmen from the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders. There were a few hitches with one or two scenes which caused frome confusion and delay, but on an opening night in a strange theatre they were perhaps unavoidable -at all events they were certainly excusableand a good-natured and warmly appreciative audience made every allowance.

Hamlet has been represented on the Iceal stage on two previous occasions-in 1882 by Herr Bandmann and a few months since by the "Stanley Awfuls;" the latter, it is hardly necessary to say, was Hamlet burlesqued, Mr. Bandmann's supports were, with one or two exceptions, inexpressibly feeble, and taken in its entirety the German tragedian's representation was far less successful than that presented by Mr. Miln's combination, Mr. Miln is not our ideal Hamles, but he is a sound actor, a good elocutionist with a powerful voice and cultivated method, and he carried out an intelligent and scholarly conception with consistent ability. On the other hand he has unfortunately contracted mannerisms which in our opinion greatly detract from the merits of his impersonation. Totally unlike Henry Irving in appearance, Mr. Miln has nevertheless taken that popular English actor as his model, and the study has been such a close one that in many scenes it requires but a very slight stretch of imagination to fancy that the voice and attitudes of Mr. Miln are the bastard elecution and stilled methods of the dearly beloved of Lyceum play-goers, Irving's mannerisms are barely endurable from Irving, -bis great genuis is their sole salvationbut they are especially objectionable when offered second-hand, If Mr. Miln would use his own natural voice, which is a rich and musical one, severely leave alone the long drawn out masal drawl we are all so familiar with, walk naturally across the stage as if walking in a room instead of tragically strutting as if propelled by hidden wires-if, in fact, he would give. lus his own Hamlet pure and undiluted, his claims to a really high-class impersonation would be far higher than at present, judging from Saturday night, Is the case. But in spite of all this, there are many points in Mr, Miln's performance descrying hearty commendation. The famous closet scene was especially well done "and although in some parts capable of being with advantage slightly toned down, the actor's powerful grasp of the requirements of a difficult situation fairly deserved the unanimous

Irving-isms, were painfully obtrusives but the death seen; was most powerfully rendered. It would be hardly worth while to criticise Mr. Miln in detail on mere matters of stage fechnique, but we may as well remark that his "make-up" was much too bucolic for the studious philosopher and metaphysician, and that he made little use of that invaluable art known us facial expression. To sum up, we consider Mr. Miln's Hamlet a good if not absolutely a great performance; as to his status as a Shakesperean actor, a single impersonation is not sufficient to justily the LONDON, February 15th. For some weel's past there have been unfavor-" able reports concerning the Hansard Publishing daysit became known that a receiver had been put in presension of the office of the company in Debenture Corporation, Limited. The receiver is John Annan, of Bronds, Patterson & Co.

The business of the union started under what appeared to be favorable conditions, for in 1880'00 ordinary shares received 12 per cent. At a meeting of the union on January 20, 1892, a satisfactory account was given as to the progress of the husiness. The result was the raising of the original capital of £175,000 to £500,000 In July a further increase of capital was sanctioned to absorb shares, and the capital was raised to £1 one,000. There was also a deben- | flot. ture capital of £ 250,000. The Directors, including Horatio Bottomley, Sir H. Isaacs and Sir R. Lethbridge, anticipated a golden future.

It is now pretty generally known that a large amount of this capital was not placed, and in consequence none of the business mentioned in the second prospectus was actually taken over. Bottomley, finding his scheme rather too difficult to handle, endeavoured about a week ago to dispose of the unplaced shares by the formation of Bottomley's Trust, Limited.

In the mean time the difficulties in regard to the payment of interest on the original debentures have brought matters to a climax. The Debenture Corporation which makes it its business to invest in debenture securities, practically took over the whole of the union's debentures, amounting to $10,000, the interest on which would be $15,000. This has not been paid, and the corporation, acting in the interest of the bondholders, has taken the course of putting it in the hands of a receiver.

The Shipping Federation has issued an ultimatum which/declares that the dictation of unions is unbearable and that the federation will refuse to employ any man unless be pledges himself to embark on any vessel with which he algns articles, whether the remainder of the crew be unionists or not. The federation disavows any intention to interfere with the unions or to reduce wages.
